Section 5: Songs of Loneliness and Wanting

- Why Don't You Lay With Me, As I Sit By The Water: A reflective, serene piece capturing a quiet moment of longing by the water's edge, blending physical solitude with a deep desire for connection and peace.
- They Were Words Not Often Said: An emotional, retrospective track focusing on the weight of unexpressed feelings, rare words of significance, and the lasting resonance of what is left unsaid between people.
- You May Not Know My Name: A poignant reflection on distance, anonymity, and the invisible bonds connecting souls who share a similar path despite being worlds apart.
- Thoughts That I Wonder: An introspective journey into the quiet hours of contemplation, questioning life's directions, mysteries, and the inner workings of the human heart.
- In A Bed Of Roses I Lye (2014): A bittersweet piece contrasting the imagery of comfort and beauty with underlying emotional vulnerability and personal solitude.
- If You Only Knew: A heartfelt expression of hidden depths, unspoken truths, and the desire for someone to truly understand the emotional landscape behind the surface.
- Thinking About You: A tender, focused song centered around memory, distance, and the persistent presence of someone special in the narrator's thoughts.
- You Make Me Wanta Be A Better Man: An inspiring, transformative track about personal growth and redemption sparked by deep affection and the desire to rise above past shortcomings.
